

He's Lying

He's lying when he tells you you're not worth very much.
He lied when he said you didn't need to cry out for the Savior's gentle touch.

He'll try to tell you that friends, family and no one in the church really cares.
Then he'll send another thought about why people give you crazy looks and stares.

He'll tell you you're not good enough and none of those Christians are true.
He'll say, "Don't pick up the Bible or go to church, just do the best you can do."

As God's gentle voice prompts you several times throughout the day...
"That's not really necessary, do something else" the deceiver's venom will say.

He'll try to convince you to indulge in your carnal desires stating that "life should be enjoyable and you're not headed for eternal fires."

Thoughts of hatefulness, revenge, bitterness, anxiety and dread he'll send in rotations, to dictate your actions via your head.

He's lying to you. He's a great deceiver and showman you see.
He'll say God won't provide for you and your lot will be empty.

"Appeal to your flesh, go after your dreams, do something that's real.
Don't waste your time with that dead church. Touch. See. Taste and feel."

He's lying and he's doing an eternally damaging job.
Will you adhere to the voice that seeks to destroy, kill and rob?
